Kirsten --

Deadline met to reserve against proposed amendments to WHO health regulations

New Zealand First welcomes the government's decision to reserve against the proposed amendments to the World Health Organisation (WHO) health regulations also known as the 'International Health Regulations' (IHR).

Meeting the 1 December submission deadline was one of the 49 actions of the government's '100 day plan', released on Wednesday 29 November.

Before New Zealand accepts any agreements from international agencies that may limit national decision-making, they will be subject to a "National Interest Test".

Kirsten, we made sure that this is a commitment laid out in the National - New Zealand First coalition agreement.

Ensuring that New Zealand's domestic law holds primacy over any international agreements sends a clear message that we value our sovereignty.

New Zealand First will do what it can to protect our nation's interests.

Kirsten, In order to increase our influence we need your support to grow as a party. Please consider making a financial contribution so that we can do more to get our message to other New Zealanders.
