

YOUR FREEDOM IS AT RISK

8 items of major concern

regarding the proposed WHO treaty and International Health Regulations (IHR) amendments

1. Biological warfare agent proliferation

The treaty and the proposed amendments instruct nations that they must perform surveillance for potential pandemic pathogens, build or maintain sequencing labs and share actual specimens with the WHO (where a BioHub has been created for this purpose) and share the sequences online. This demands the proliferation of biological weapons agents—which is a crime (based on Security Council Resolution 1540 and the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention).

1 a. The June 2, 2023 "Bureau text" version of the treaty also called for nations performing Gain-of-Function research to reduce "administrative impediments" to the work. In other words, restrictions on the research should be relaxed, which would make lab leaks more likely to occur. This paragraph was removed from the October 30, 2023 version of the treaty. There is clear evidence that Covid 19 was augmented in Gain-of-function programs, overseen by Tony Fauci then leaked in Wuhan.

2. Giving the WHO a blank check to create new rules in the future

The treaty calls for new committees to be created in the future that will make the rules for how the pandemic prevention and response apparatus will work—which provides essentially a blank, signed contract to the WHO to create whatever rules it wants.

3. Liability free vaccines will be developed at warp speed and could be forced upon us without safety trials

The treaty calls for rapid vaccine development /production and shaving time off all aspects of vaccine development, testing and manufacture. This requires vaccines to be used without licenses, and the treaty calls for nations to have laws in place to issue Emergency Use Authorizations for this purpose, and to "manage" liability issues. See "The WHO's Proposed Treaty will Increase Man-Made Pandemics"* for more information. The US, EU and others have specifically called for 100-day vaccine development and an additional 30 days for production of pandemic vaccines. This would allow for no meaningful human testing. Prior to 2019, it normally took 10 to 15 years to develop a vaccine before marketing it.

4. The WHO thinks human rights are negotiable

The amendments removed “human rights, dignity and freedom of persons” from the IHR language. Following complaints, this phrase was later inserted into the Treaty - but not in all treaty drafts. It is clear that the WHO thinks human rights are optional, and can be discarded at will.

5. Social media surveillance and censorship of citizens is required

Both the amendments and the treaty call for nation states to perform surveillance of their citizens’ social media, and to censor and prevent the spread of information that does not conform to the WHO’s public health narratives. Yet the treaty also calls for citizens to be free to access information, as long as the information is given the WHO’s seal of approval—otherwise it must be censored.

6. We may not learn what is in the amendments until after they are passed the amendments to the international health regulations have been negotiated in secret for 15 months. The public may never see them before they are voted on in May.

Why is there such secrecy regarding the proposed amendments?

7. The WHO Director-General could become your personal physician

According to the proposed amendments, the WHO D-G would be able to commandeer and move medical supplies from one country to another, decide what treatments can be used, and restrict the use of other treatments. He could order lockdowns and quarantines, and control what information your doctor can access

8. When will the WHO be able to use its newly minted powers?

The WHO Director General will gain these broad powers whenever he chooses to declare a Public Health Emergency of International Concern. His powers can extend after the emergency is over, and can begin before an actual emergency occurs, as he may make a declaration based on merely the potential for a public health emergency. D-G Tedros Ghebreyesus has already declared three Public Health Emergencies of International Concern in the six years he has been in office.

The treaty will be in force continuously, requiring no declaration or pandemic to confer new powers to the WHO.
